2013 June "Generations" Sail

(Includes Pictures Taken by Tim & Skyler)

Day 1 started off a little drippy but the rest were beautiful.

Tied up at the Bremerton Yacht Club. Tacos for supper with Mike and Beth Correll. Very Good!!

Before supper we toured the Bremerton waterfront with Mike and Beth. Here is a Navy destroyer open for tours.

Bremerton Shipyard. A carrier being refurbished and a "trailer park" of mothballed attack submarines in the foreground.

Sunny skies welcome us to Poulsbo and the Signature Yachts' Open House

Welcome to Poulsbo

Signature Yachts hosted a welcome reception, salmon BBQ, and blueberry pancake breakfast.

Party! 47 sailboats of all shapes and sizes

Note "Bow Thruster Blender". Recipe: One 12 Volt Car Battery, Bow Thruster from a Large Yacht, Two ½ Gallon Jugs of Rum, Lots of Fruit Juice, Push Red Button and Voila! It is amazing no one tipped their chair into the Sound.

After Poulsbo, we go north up Saratoga Passage to Penn Cove

At times there was complete calm on the way north.

Anchored in Penn Cove we still got knocked around a little by the winds from out on the strait.

Pretty sail pictures! Original plan was to go through Deception Pass and return via the Strait of Jaun de Fuca, but gale force winds on the strait caused us to sail back down Saratoga Passage with 20 knot winds behind us.
Next stop was Port Ludlow, one of our favorite ports. Herons are a common sight. And you don't have to drop in quarters to get hot water in the showers!!

Victoria Clipper

Beautiful evening at Blake Island. The animals are quite tame on Blake Island. The raccoons are tame to the point of nuisance. Practically before we tie up a raccoon was on the dock trying to board us.
Someone motoring into Blake Island (I helped them tie up and got their Email address so I could send them the pictures.

Blake Island Sunset

Blake Island Sunrise

Back at Harbor Island – Just enough room for a barge to squeeze by